VANDERBILT, AFTER FAILURE, STARTS FOR ADIRONDACKS.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt and Miss Ives left for Sagamore, the Vanderbilt lodge in the Adirondacks, on an early train to-day.

"I don't know where my auto is now," said Mr. Vanderbilt when asked about the wind-up of his attempt to break the ten-hour automobile record.

I guess it will turn up all right."

Ine last seen of the automobile party was at 9.30 o'clock last night, when the was chowly ploughing through the roads of Larcamont. All chance of breaking the record had vanished hours before. Having left Newport at 8.30 the lower party was at 9.30 o'clock. At that time Mr. Vanderbilt was only an hour out of New Haven. hilt was only an hour out of New Haven.

The failure to break a record was caused by rain and muddy roads, although the automobilists had fair weather and good travel as far as New London, Conn., which was not reached until 1.10 o'clock in the aiternoon.

The disappointment of Mr. Vanderbilt was shared by his friends, many of whom gathered on Fifth avenue to witness his triumphal spurt down the rashlonable thoroughfare at the windup of his trip.

A big Mercedes machine which crossed Central Bridge shortly before midnight is thought to nave been the belated Vanderbilt machine.

Big Patrolman Kennedy came in response to the bell. He had barely set foot in the room when the stranger saw him and darted for the door. He got out quicker than Sergt. Hammond ever saw anybody else go, and then the button was pushed in and kept there. A dozen policemen were chasing the man across City Hail Park, calling "Stop thief" and "Stop that man." The hundreds of pedestrians, men, women and little children, passing through the park scampered for places of safety, some even running into the City Hail.

The man, yelling frantically now and believing the "poisoners" were upon him, circled the park and then made for the jam of people in the Manhattan entrance to the Brooklyn Bridge, He was yelling to the crowd to get out of the way. The police were yelling for the people ahead of him to stop him. The throng scattered.

Policeman Kennedy reached the man as he was about to take the motorman's place on a Flushing avenue trolley car and jerked him to the pavement, while the man screamed, frightening women and children.

Haif a dozen of the bridge policemen and others from the City Hall station went to Kennedy's assistance. The mad man's strength and energy was enough for all of them and for three minutes business was suspended on the bridge while the minions of the law subdued Heickel and carried him bodily back to the station.

From there he was sent in a straitize, who have the pavilion in Bellevue Hospital.
